JUST A PLAIN STORY, WITH NO FANCY FRILLS.

Our lines of Shoes are without doubt the best in this city. We sell no shoes that are not standard make. Do you realize what that means? Well, there is this about it: when you buy from us it means a better shoe for less money, and furthermore, a shoe that you can depend on, for we know what we sell. We buy no shoes simply because we can make a large profit on them, but they are bought by us with the honest intention of giving something good for the money. Make your wants plain and try us, is what we ask.

ADM. GEO. DEWEY HIGHLY HONORED.

The Hero of Manila Presented With the Flag of Adm. Farragut, of the Hartford.

He Also Receives a Loving Cup, Valued at $5,000 From the Citizens of New York—Adm. Schley shares Honors with Dewey.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—New York was decked brilliantly Thursday in honor of the gallant sailor who is waiting at her gate. Had an ocean of color swept through the city its ebbing tide could not have stained the streets more brilliantly. Hundreds of miles of red, white and blue bunting covered the noble facades of Broadway and Fifth avenue and a million flags flutter over the town. Not even the churches have escaped the universal decoration. The doors and gothic windows of Old Trinity on lower Broadway are gracefully draped with the national color and in ancient Trinity graveyard the tomb of that gallant sailor, who, dying issued the command not to give up the ship, lies shrouded in the silken folds of the flag for which he died.

A million visitors are here to participate in the glorious celebration.

Sailors and marines ashore from the big fighting machines helped to swell the crowd trooping in all directions. Uniformed members of the staff of arriving governors were everywhere.

The arrangements for the two-days' celebration are completed. The great arch at Madison Square modeled after the Triumphal Arch of Titus and upon which the most famous sculptors of America have lavished their genius, is practically finished and stands a superb tribute to the nation's hero. It is more beautiful than the arch in Rome.

At 10:30 all the sailors on the Olympia who fought in the battle of Manila bay were called to the quarterdeck and lined up in review before the admiral.

Capt. Lambert addressed the men briefly, informing them that congress had voted to each a medal, commemorative of their valor and victory in their fight with the Spaniards, and that Adm. Dewey had ordered that the medals be distributed so that the men could wear them during the celebration.

The ceremony was an interesting one, and the proud Jackies, when dismissed, turned away with beaming faces, hugging their prizes to their breasts.

Another interesting event occurred when Commander George W. Baird, who sailed with Farragut and Dewey in the West Gulf squadron, in 1861, unrolled a package which he had carefully guarded all the way to the Olympia, and displaying a faded blue admiral's ensign, upon which were stitched four white stars, he said to Adm. Dewey: "I wish to present to you the first admiral's flag ever 'broken out' in the navy of this country. That grand old admiral whose name and memory all so reverently hoisted this ensign upon the good ship Hartford, before New Orleans and afterwards on the Franklin; and since it came down from that masthead has never been whipped by the wind or worn by the elements. You, the worthy successor of that great admiral whose tactics you so successfully followed a short while ago, I deem the proper person for Farragut's mantle to fall upon."

Adm. Dewey was deeply affected, and tears were in his eyes as he gazed at the souvenir. It was several moments before he could find his voice. Finally he said:

"I'll fly it at the masthead—I'll fly it in the parade—I'll fly it always—and—when I strike my admiral's flag this will be the flag I shall strike."

Owing to the the stream of official visitors, the roar of salutes continued almost without interruption all day.

Maj. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, at the head of the Washington committee, called to submit the programme for the reception at the national capital, and Maj. Gen. Merritt and his staff, stiff with gold braid, came over from Governor's Island to officially welcome Adm. Dewey in the name of the army. They were received with all the honors befitting their rank, but the climax was not reached until Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, came down the bay in the afternoon on the yacht Wild Duck. He was accompanied by Gen. Francis V. Greene, some officers of the New York naval militia and several of Dewey's captains at Manila, including Capt. Dyer, of the Baltimore; Capt. Wood, of the Petrel; Capt. Wilder, of the Boston, and Capt. Walker, of the Concord. When they got aboard, Adm. Dewey took them over the ship, and the sight of the fighting captains set the tars mad with delight.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Adm. Dewey's reception began Friday under most favorable auspices. The weather was bright, clear and crisp. The first of the two days' celebrations was devoted to demonstration on water.

At one o'clock sharp the squadron got under way. It was an inspiring moment when the column started up the harbor and the great naval parade began to be a reality. First came the police boat Patrol, which was the apex of a wedge spreading out to the fireboats New Yorker and Van Wyck which followed abreast. The steamer Sandy Hook, having on board the mayor and the representatives of the city of New York, with the standards of the city flying from the fore and aft masts, steamed alongside of the Olympia, the flag ship of Adm. Dewey on the port side.

After the Olympia came the armored cruiser New York, the flag ship of Kr. Adm. Sampson, with her big turrets and guns appearing like a moving fortress as she followed in the wake of the admiral's ship. The Chicago brought up the rear of the column.

Following the New York were the two first-class battleships Indiana and Massachusetts. Then followed the gunboat Marietta, small by comparison with the Lancaster, with the auxiliary cruiser Scorpion behind.

When the parade reached a point opposite Hoboken, a welcome to the admiral was fired from a cannon on the green in Hudson park. From some points on shore Adm. Dewey could be seen standing on the bridge of the Olympia, and wherever this was the case the cheering and waving of handkerchiefs by the crowd was wildly enthusiastic. The crowd waiting at Grant's tomb was the largest ever gathered there.

The admiral's cruiser at 2:25 o'clock was opposite Seventy-ninth street. Then there was a tremendous demonstration. Cannon roared, the people yelled and flags and handkerchiefs were waved from the streets and hundreds of roofs and windows.

eral states, who rode in carriages, though many of them were popular and would have received big demonstrations at any other time, passed almost unnoticed. The crowds would have none of them to-day.

It was R.R. Adm. Schley who divided the honors with the central figure of the day. He received a demonstration second only to that of Dewey. People along the line of march fairly rose at him shouting their already lacerated throats to the breaking point. "Hurrah for the hero of Santiago!" "There is the man that smashed Cervera's fleet!" "Hip, hip, hurrah for Schley!" and kindred cries came from all parts of the line.

In upper Fifth avenue some enthusiastic lady threw him a handful of roses. They landed fairly in the carriage. The admiral leaned forward, picked them up and lifted them to his lips. Instantly all the ladies in the balcony seemed possessed with the desire to have their flowers similarly honored, and he was fairly bombarded.

Many of the flowers fell into the street, only to be caught up by eager spectators and carried to the carriages. Before he got to Madison Adm. Schley was up to his arms in flowers.

The first ceremony today was the presentation at the city hall of a gold loving cup to the admiral by Mayor Van Wyck on behalf of the city of New York.

Mayor Van Wyck's address was couched in most elegant language, reviewing Dewey's life from childhood to Manly bay. When the mayor had concluded Adm. Dewey replied as follows:

"It would be quite impossible to express in words how deeply I am moved by this—all these honors, one after the other—that beautiful cup, the freedom of the city, this great, magnificent reception. I can not say what I want, but speaking for myself and lished his breakfast, he sent for his private physician, Dr. Percy, who was closeted with him for a few minutes. Adm. Dewey later called on the members of his family and his relatives and chatted with them for fully one hour.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Adm. Dewey left the Waldorf Astoria Monday at 12:15 o'clock on his journey to Washington. The trip from Jersey City to Washington

LOST PROMISES.

My heart grew away from the good,
When I left the ways
In the golden day.
Where I strolled at eve in the wood;
Now I often stand
On the shell-strewn sand
And think of the seas between.
My heart passed away from the true
When my dreams were young,
And my harp was hung
On willows in the sunlit dew.
While I laughed at will
At the sleeping hill,
That wakened to answer me.
My heart grew away from the sky
That showered its joy
When I was a boy.
When tears never blinded my eye;
But with hope and care,
And an earnest prayer,
Will bring all that has gone away.

We now began to hurry a little, and found that Corte was right, for the soldiers who had lined the passage inside the Bronze gates had taken themselves off, and a considerable number of servants and followers were enjoying here the results of piratical raids on the supper tables.

Outside, however, everything was in order, for De Leyva was a thorough soldier. I found both the Spaniard and De Briconnet cursing their luck at being on the guards, and attacking a capon which they were washing down with copious draughts of Falernian. Their duties kept them outside, and it was a poor supper they were making by the light of torches, seated together on the steps of the vatican.

"What! out already, cavaliere?" asked De Briconnet. "Is the cardinal going?"

"No, but there is a little business," I answered, as I called Jacopo.

"Non du diable! Can I not come?"

"It would be a relaxation," said De Leyva.

"I am afraid not, gentlemen, although we thank you. Here, Jacopo! Get three of our fellows and follow me. Tell the others to hold their horses."

It was done in a twinkling, and in a few steps, having harked back, we were in the Papal gardens. The casino or summer-house of the pope was in full light, and we directed our steps there without difficulty. I made two of our men walk in front, Jacopo and the third behind us, and we remained in the middle. Strict orders were given to each behind us, and it was a poor supper they were making by the light of torches, seated together on the steps of the vatican.

Except for the moonlight, the gardens themselves were not illuminated, and as we tramped along the paths I thought to myself how easy it would have been for Michelotto to have got rid of both St. Armande and myself, if we had been foolish enough to go without escort.

Nothing happened. We reached the casino and waited there a full hour; but there was no sign of Michelotto.

At last I lost patience.

"He never meant to cross a sword with you, cavaliere. I can bear witness you were here, and kept tryst. We have escaped a felon's blow, together. Come back—it is getting late—even for his eminence!" We turned, and made our way back, but it was a good two hours before D'Amboise retired. Bayard had gone on long before, declining all offers of escort. When we reached the palace we found he had arrived safely.

I wished St. Armand a good night, with more respect for him in my heart than I ever felt before, and turned to seek my apartments. Late as it was, however, there was to be no sleep for me, as De Briconnet, whose brain the Falernian had merely made more lively, insisted on accompanying me, and we split another flask, and talked of falconry till the verge of the morning.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE OPAL RING.

"His eminence will await the Signor Donati at supper this evening."

Deafure delivered his message, received his answer, and tripped away, his little-page's cap set jauntily on the side of his head, and the hilt of his dagger clinking against the silver chain which held it to his belt. As for me, my heart leaped at the words, for I felt sure my business was come, and, summoning Jacopo, I gave him the necessary orders to have our men in readiness for an immediate start. I then sought St. Armande, and told him what I expected.

"I am ready," he said, simply.

"Very well, then sup lightly, and await me in my apartments."

I turned back, and on reaching my rooms was surprised to find I had a visitor awaiting me. It was Corte. As I have said, he has cast aside his fantastic dress, and was robed as a doctor. He still kept his heavy book under his arm, and the features of his curious seamed face, and thin, bloodless lips, were as pale as if he had arisen from the dead. His eyes alone blazed with an unnatural brilliancy, but he was outwardly calm.

"I came but to see if you were safe, signore, after last night," he said, as he took my hand.

"Thanks," I replied, offering him a seat, "we are all quite safe. Nothing happened. The don was not there. Either he had changed his mind, or we were too strong in force."

"A little of both, I should think," he said, with a thin smile, as he placed his book on the table. "Signore," he went on, "to see me not a little surprised and curious to see me as I am?"

"Well, Messer Corte, I will own to it. But I am honestly glad that fortune has given the wheel a right turn for you."

"It is not fortune," he said, "it is something greater. It is fate. No chance turn of the wheel of a sleeping goddess. When I fled from you, signore, on that day," his voice choked little, "I came to Rome. Never mind how. Here a great man found me. Great men pick up little things for their purposes sometimes. And Mathew Corte, who is but a little man, knows things the great man does not know. Ho! ho!" and he laughed mirthlessly.

"And that has put crowns in your purse?"

"Yes, crowns in my purse, crowns in my purse," he repeated, and then the old madness came upon him, and he rose and paced the room. "I could have done it last night, made the hilt of my dagger ring against his heart—the devil—the devil. But he is not to die this way—not thus—not thus. He will die as no other man has died, and it will come soon, very soon—Mathew Corte swears this."

He stopped suddenly, and turned to me with the question:

"Have you ever seen a mad dog die?"

"No," I answered, wondering what would come next.

"Well, my dog is dead."

"I am sorry," I began, but he interrupted.

"Dead, I say. Life went from it in writhings and twistings, in screams of agony—the little beast, poor little beast! I would have ended its misery, but I wanted to see.

I wanted to find some death so horrible that it would pass the invention of man. And I have found it, signore. See this toy of a knife! This fairy's dagger!" and he held up a tiny lanceet, "only a touch of it, and a man would die as that dog did, in writhings, in twistings, in screams."

I rose and put my hand on his arm, keeping my eyes steadily on his face.

"Corte," I said, "this is not like you. You are not well. Here is some wine," and I poured him out a goblet of Orvieto. He drained it at a gulp, and sat with his head buried in his hands.

As he sat there, the scene in the lonely hut, when I went forth an outcast from Arezzo, came back to me, and there rose before me the dim light of the torch, the mad figure of my host, and I could almost hear the patter of the rain and the dying hisses of the log fire without. Then I saw other things as well, and a pity came on me for the man before me. A sudden thought struck me, and, acting on the impulse of the moment, I spoke:

"See here, Corte! You are ill, you want rest, quiet. Throw off these dark thoughts, and do what I say. Two miles from Colza, in the Bergamasca, lies a small farm. It is mine. Mine still, though mortgaged. Go there. Ask for the Casino Savelli, and say you have come from me—from Ugo di Savelli. You know my name now, and they will want nothing more from you. Live there until you are better, or as long as you like. The air is pure, in the hills there is the bouqueton for you to hunt; the life is good. Will you do this?"

He lifted his head, and looked at me. Then, rising, he placed one hand on each of my shoulders, thin hands were, with long bony fingers that held like claws.

"Signore," he said, with emotion, "Donati or Savelli—whichever you are—are you a good man. I thank you, but it cannot be. Good-by!" And, lifting up his book, he turned and strode out of the room, leaving me a little chilled.

After that I waited for my meeting with D'Amboise. I saw to the packing of a valise, went down and looked at the horses, closely inspected the arms and mounts of my men, who looked capable of anything, and, in one way and another, managed to get through the time, until about the sixth hour, when his eminence supped. I presented myself punctually, and was ushered into an inner apartment which I had not hitherto seen, and where the supper was evidently to be held, for the table was set out there. I was alone at first, and, seating myself on a lounge, looked about me. The room was small, but beautifully fitted up, and had all the appearance of being the cardinal's private study. By my side was a table on which was spread a map, with various crosses marked on it in red chalk, the chalk itself lying on the map, where it had been carelessly flung. In front of me was an altar, surmounted by a silver crucifix, bearing an exquisitely-carved Christ. Near it, in a corner, leaned a long straight sword, from whose cross handle hung a pair of fine steel gauntlets. Resting on a cushion, placed on a stand, was the cardinal's hat, and behind the stand I could see the brown outline of a pair of riding boots and the glitter of burnished spurs. In a corner of the room was a large table, set out with writing materials and covered with papers. Running my eyes over these idly, I finally let them rest on the supper table, which was arranged with lavish profusion. The curtains of the windows were drawn, and the light from eight tall candles in jeweled holders, fell on the rose and amber of the wine in the quaint flasks, on the cheerful brown crusts of the pastries, on the gay enameling of the comfitures, and on the red gold of the plate. I noticed, too, that the table was set for three only. It was evidently a private supper, where things were to be discussed, and I became glad, for I felt already a step onwards towards winning back my name, and I seemed to see in the mirror on the wall to my left, a vision of a woman with dark hair, and dark eyes.

"Your eminence!" I finally started up. I had not observed the entrance of D'Amboise until he stood beside me and touched me lightly on the shoulder.

"Dreaming, cavaliere! I did not think you were so given. I am afraid that, late as I am, I must still keep you from your supper, for I expect another guest. Ha! there he is!"

Indeed, as he spoke, the door swung open noiselessly, and Machiavelli entered. He was plainly and simply dressed, and wore no sword, merely a dagger at his side. I thought, however, I caught the gleam of a steel corslet under his vest, as he greeted the cardinal, and D'Amboise's own scaphire was not more brilliant than the single opal which blazed in the secretary's hand.

"This is the Cavaliere Donati, your excellency," he said, "but I think you know each other."

Machiavelli extended his hand to me with his inscrutable smile; but as I met his eyes I saw that they were troubled and anxious. He, however, spoke with easy unconcern.

"Well met, Messer Donati. I can only say I am sorry we parted so soon. I would have given much to have had you in Florence for a few days more."

"Your excellency is most kind."

"St. Dennis!" said the cardinal, "but are you gentlemen going to exchange compliments, and starve instead of sitting down to supper. Burin, are we not ready?" and he turned to his gray-haired major-domo, who had entered the room.

"Your excellency is served," replied the man, and we took our seats on each side of the table, D'Amboise between us.

"You need not wait, Burin, but remain in the passage." Burin stepped out silently, and the cardinal said, with an air of apology: "You must not mind so informal a repast, gentlemen; but we have much to discuss—pleasure first, however—my maitre d'hotel has an artist's soul, and he will have a fit if we do not touch this pastry."

The cardinal ate and talked. I now and then put in a word, but the secretary was very silent, and hardly touched anything.

"St. Dennis!" said D'Amboise, "but your excellency is a poor trencherman. And I heard so much of you!"

"Your excellency will excuse me, when I say I have bad news."

D'Amboise became grave at once. "Let me say how sorry I am. It is not a matter of state?" and he glanced meaningly at the secretary.

"Not in the least; but much worse—a domestic matter. I do not see why I should not tell you. That cursed brigand Baglioni has seized on my ward Angiola Castellani, and holds her a fast prisoner in Perugia."

I felt cold all over to my feet.

"The Lady Angiola?" I exclaimed.

"Precisely," said Machiavelli, dryly; "I think you have met."

"But this can be easily remedied," burst out D'Amboise; "a demand from the Signory, a word from France."

"Will not bring the dead to life again," put in the secretary.

"Have you ever seen a mad dog die?"

"No," I answered, wondering what would come next.

"Well, my dog is dead."

"I am sorry," I began, but he interrupted.

"Dead, I say. Life went from it in writhings and twistings, in screams of agony—the little beast, poor little beast! I would have ended its misery, but I wanted to see.

I wanted to find some death so horrible that it would pass the invention of man. And I have found it, signore. See this toy of a knife! This fairy's dagger!" and he held up a tiny lanceet, "only a touch of it, and a man would die as that dog did, in writhings, in twistings, in screams."

I rose and put my hand on his arm, keeping my eyes steadily on his face.

"Corte," I said, "this is not like you. You are not well. Here is some wine," and I poured him out a goblet of Orvieto. He drained it at a gulp, and sat with his head buried in his hands.

As he sat there, the scene in the lonely hut, when I went forth an outcast from Arezzo, came back to me, and there rose before me the dim light of the torch, the mad figure of my host, and I could almost hear the patter of the rain and the dying hisses of the log fire without. Then I saw other things as well, and a pity came on me for the man before me. A sudden thought struck me, and, acting on the impulse of the moment, I spoke:

"See here, Corte! You are ill, you want rest, quiet. Throw off these dark thoughts, and do what I say. Two miles from Colza, in the Bergamasca, lies a small farm. It is mine. Mine still, though mortgaged. Go there. Ask for the Casino Savelli, and say you have come from me—from Ugo di Savelli. You know my name now, and they will want nothing more from you. Live there until you are better, or as long as you like. The air is pure, in the hills there is the bouqueton for you to hunt; the life is good. Will you do this?"

He lifted his head, and looked at me. Then, rising, he placed one hand on each of my shoulders, thin hands were, with long bony fingers that held like claws.

"Signore," he said, with emotion, "Donati or Savelli—whichever you are—are you a good man. I thank you, but it cannot be. Good-by!" And, lifting up his book, he turned and strode out of the room, leaving me a little chilled.

After that I waited for my meeting with D'Amboise. I saw to the packing of a valise, went down and looked at the horses, closely inspected the arms and mounts of my men, who looked capable of anything, and, in one way and another, managed to get through the time, until about the sixth hour, when his eminence supped. I presented myself punctually, and was ushered into an inner apartment which I had not hitherto seen, and where the supper was evidently to be held, for the table was set out there. I was alone at first, and, seating myself on a lounge, looked about me as I am. I must still keep you from your supper, for I expect another guest. Ha! there he is!"

Indeed, as he spoke, the door swung open noiselessly, and Machiavelli entered. He was plainly and simply dressed, and wore no sword, merely a dagger at his side. I thought, however, I caught the gleam of a steel corslet under his vest, as he greeted the cardinal, and D'Amboise's own scaphire was not more brilliant than the single opal which blazed in the secretary's hand.

"Dreaming, cavaliere! I did not think you were so given. I am afraid that, late as I am, I must still keep you from your supper, for I expect another guest. Ha! there he is!"

"This is the Cavaliere Donati, your excellency," he said, "but I think you know each other."

Machiavelli extended his hand to me with his inscrutable smile; but as I met his eyes I saw that they were troubled and anxious. He, however, spoke with easy unconcern.

"Well met, Messer Donati. I can only say I am sorry we parted so soon. I would have given much to have had you in Florence for a few days more."

"Your excellency is served," replied the man, and he glanced meaningly at the secretary.

"Not in the least; but much worse—a domestic matter. I do not see why I should not tell you. That cursed brigand Baglioni has seized on my ward Angiola Castellani, and holds her a fast prisoner in Perugia."

I felt cold all over to my feet.

"The Lady Angiola?" I exclaimed.

"Precisely," said Machiavelli, dryly; "I think you have met."

"But this can be easily remedied," burst out D'Amboise; "a demand from the Signory, a word from France."

"Will not bring the dead to life again," put in the secretary.

"Have you ever seen a mad dog die?"

While listening to Mr. Goebel speak Friday at Cynthiana Dan Whitson fell from a tree and broke his leg.

Mr. Goebel spoke to a large crowd Friday at Cynthiana. He will speak at Middlesboro to-day during the street fair.

An honest election league was formed Friday night at Lexington with two hundred members. Speeches were made by T. T. Forman, Judge Denny, Elders Spencer and Collis and Capt. R. A. Thornton.

Register to-day.

The President seems to have been very successful in burying alive that popular American, Gen. Fitzhugh Lee.

Actor Otis Skinner is playing "The Liars" in Cincinnati this week. Have the Kentucky campaign correspondents been dramatized?

Admiral Dewey has been up against it good and strong for the past week. It is doubtful if his nerves and digestion will stand the welcome he is receiving.

The Bluegrass is receiving its annual visit from an "Uncle Tom" show this week. Uncle Tom and Little Eva, like Tennyson's brook, go on forever.

W. J. Bryan telegraphs Candidate John R. McLean that he will speak in Ohio on the 19th, 20th and 21st. Mr. Bryan seems to be heaping coals on John R.'s head.

It is probable that President McKinley may be induced to make a speech in Ohio during the present campaign. The dignity of the Presidency should deter any President from mixing up in a nasty muddle.

Court Day Stock Sales.

THERE was a fair sized crowd in Paris yesterday, but business was a trifle slow in stock trading circles. There were 300 cattle on the market, some of them not being sold. Frank Bedford sold thirty-four 1,100 pound cattle at $4.75 and nineteen 1,000 pound cattle at $4.50 to Tice Asbury. McIntyre & McClinton sold fourteen heifers to Wm. Beckett at $24 each, and Frank Vimont sold six heifer calves to B. F. Buckley at $16 each. Bishop Hibler & Bro. sold 100 shropshire ewes to Jas. Ferguson at $100, fifty-nine to J. H. Martin at $335, twenty-six to Henry Wells at $156, and twenty-six to James Cassity at $156. A few mules changed hands at satisfactory figures.

There will be "A Breezy Time" in Paris on October 6th, and all the wise people will do well to take shelter in the Opera House on the day the breeze is announced.

There has been such a demand for the original production of Lewis Morrison's "Faust" that it has been decided to present it during this, its last season. Its presentation in this city will occur in the near future.

IT WASN'T A BLUFF.

In the first act of "A Breezy Time," which will appear at the Grand Friday night, there is a burlesque boxing act between the eccentric and Dutch comedians, the long and short of it.

One day last week the Dutchman gave the eccentric an upper-cut which "knocked him out," and delayed the play several minutes, and still the audience did not seem to trouble. A prize-fighter who was in the audience, and who, it is claimed, has stood before Fitzsimmons, was heard to remark that it was the best imitation he ever saw.

NUPTIAL KNOTS

Engagements, Announcements and Solennizations of The Marriage Vows.

Circuit Clerk Paton yesterday issued marriage licenses to Wm. Kearns and Miss Mamie Boughner, of this county, and Charles L. Snow and Miss Elizabeth Meyers, both of Franklin county.

The Lexington Leader says: Wednesday, October 4, the Gardner-Bayless wedding will be celebrated at 5 o'clock at Timberland, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Gardner with beautiful ceremonies. Rev. Charles T. Thomson will officiate. Miss Stattie Bayless, of Louisville, sister of the groom, will be maid of honor, and those who are to hold the aisle ribbons are: Miss Kern, Miss Lary, Miss Minnie Pettit and Mr. Will Bayless, cousin of the groom. Mr. Marshall Guerrant will be best man and Mr. Yoncey Freeman and a friend from Paris will sit with the wedding party at the bride's table. After the wedding the couple will go East, and returning from their trip will go to housekeeping in one of the new De Roode cottages on East High street.

DAVIS, THOMSON & ISGRIG.

FASHIONABLE EVENTS THIS WEEK.

BELIEVING that nothing is too handsome or too stylish for the ladies of Bourbon and surrounding counties Mrs. M. Parker has brought to Paris the exact copies of the very swell Fall hats and bonnets to be seen in Fifth avenue shops or worn on Broadway. A display of these art creations, together with a number of patterns for the less fastidious, will be held at her store Friday and Saturday of this week.

There will be a tempting bargain at every turn and eye-pleasing object on every counter. As a millinery opening is second only to a wedding or a matinee as a magnet to femininity, of course there will be a large crowd at the displays.

TWO BIG ONES IN ONE.

The Circuses of Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Almost Here.

The elephant, he goes 'round, the band began to play; the boys about the monkey cage had better keep away." Such is the sonnet the office boy is humming these days just to keep himself, and incidentally a great many of his elders, in mind of the fact that the circus is coming. And perhaps there are many other boys just like the office boy. And to "perhaps" again, perhaps there are just as many dads as there are office boys, and a twenty-story building to a doll house would be a safe wager that they have the date of Friday October 13th, jotted down in their memorandum books, for that is the date of the coming of the Combined Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' circuses. "Fresh from metropolitan triumphs and endorsed by the press of New York" is the manner in which the circus manager expresses it, and judging from the tenor of the notice enclosed he has sufficient ground for his assertion. The circus manager rises to remark: "What's in a name?" In so far as a circus is concerned, "a great deal." Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers, by a gutta percha application of grammatical license, can be made synonymous with "biggest" and also "best."

But all of this is not exactly to the point. The circus is coming, or rather two of them are, in a bona fide consolidation. The one is the circus founded and exploited by the late Adam Forepaugh, and the other that of the Sells Brothers, the Western aerie chiefs. The operators and directors of the consolidated exhibition are J. A. Bailey, sole owner of the Barnum and Bailey show, now in Europe; Peter and Lewis Sells and W. W. Cole, all names to conjure with in a matter of tented enterprises. This big combination is intended as a worthy successor in the Eastern country of the Barnum and Bailey show, a fact made apparent by the connection of J. A. Bailey therewith. It set out upon its mission with an inauguration in New York city, and immediately sprang into metropolitan favor by the superiority of the performance given. The exhibitions given on the road tour are said to be in exact duplication of those given in Madison Square Garden, New York, and along this line of reasoning it is safely assumed that the new combination will become a prime favorite in the Eastern country.

For Special Commissioner E. K. Thomas, 115 acres near Spears Mill, belonging to George W. Thomas' estate, to Alva Thomas, at $85 per acre.

Judge Breckinridge and Judge Mulligan.

Judge Robt. Breckinridge, of Danville, candidate for Attorney General, and Judge James Mulligan, of Lexington, addressed a crowd numbering about four hundred yesterday afternoon at the court house, and were given respectful attention by the audience.

Judge Breckinridge was introduced by Hon. John S. Smith, his late opponent for the nomination for Attorney General, in a neat speech. Judge Breckinridge devoted himself mainly to State issues, and scored the corporations in severe terms.

Judge Mulligan was introduced by Mr. F. L. McChesney in a brief speech, and spoke until almost five o'clock. Judge Mulligan's speech was much complimented.

Religious Announcements.

Eld. Mark Collis, of Lexington, will fill Eld. J. S. Sweeney's pulpit at the Christian Church Sunday morning and evening. Eld. Spencer, of Lexington, will preach for Eld. Sweeney on the following Sunday, and on the fifth Sunday the pulpit will be filled by Prof. Fairhurst, of Kentucky University.

Rev. J. A. Dickson, of Hot Springs, Ark., father of Hon. E. M. Dickson and Dr. Chas. Dickson, of this city, will preach at the Second Presbyterian Church Sunday.

Instead of preaching a regular sermon Sunday morning Rev. F. J. Cheek gave his congregation at the First Presbyterian Church a most interesting lecture about his recent trip to Colorado, Utah, California, Oregon, and other points in the West. Rev. Cheek preached to 1,800 soldiers just before they embarked for Manila.

Rev. George O. Barnes is preaching to large crowds at his meeting in Stanford.

OUR FRENCH COUSINS ANGRY.

THE exclusive milliners in the French capital over the ocean are very angry that their choicest patterns should be copied so accurately and so quickly by the Fifth avenue shops in New York. They intend to keep the style an entire season before giving them to America but the clever Yankees have them almost as soon as they are seen on the Champs-Elysees, and immediately after the Fifth avenue shops get them Mrs. Corne Watson brings the very choicest to the French capital's Kentucky namesake. The Bluegrass beauties surpass their French cousins in point of comeliness and are only a trifle behind them in securing stylish millinery. Every lady who would see these beautiful hats should attend Mrs. Watson's display on Friday and Saturday of this week. The invitation is general and all of the ladies are expected. Mrs. Watson has an efficient corps of assistants to wait on all who call.

WEBER'S GREAT BAND.

John C. Weber, the band master, who will lead his great aggregation at each daily concert during the Lexington trots, October 3 to 14, has the largest repertoire of any conductor in the West. He has all the up-to-date selections and a standing order with publishers for everything new. Weber says the only way to be successful is to cater to the public. The people pay for it and should have what they want, whether classical, light or ragtime music. Five of Weber's men have standing offers from Sousa and Herbert, but they can make more money by not going on the road.

GEN. JOE WHEELER

PRAISES PERUNA,

The Great Catarrh Cure.

JOE WHEELER'S CHARGE AT SAN JUAN HILL.

Major General Joseph Wheeler, commanding the cavalry forces in front of Santiago and the author of "The Santiago Campaign," in speaking of the great catarrh remedy, Pe-ru-na, says: "I join with Senators Sullivan, Roach and McEnery in their good opinion of Pe-ru-na. It is recommended to me by those who have used it as an excellent tonic and particularly effective as a cure for catarrh."

United States Senator McEnery.

Hon. S. D. McEnery, United States Senator from Louisiana, says the following in regard to Pe-ru-na:

"Pe-ru-na is an excellent tonic. I have used it sufficiently to say that I believe it to be all that you claim for it. —S. D. McEnery, New Orleans, Louisiana."

United States Senator Sullivan.

"I desire to say I have been taking Pe-ru-na for some time for catarrh, and have found it an excellent medicine, giving me more relief than anything I have ever taken." —W. V. Sullivan, Oxford, Miss.

United States Senator Roach.

"Persuaded by a friend I have used Pe-ru-na as a tonic, and am glad to testify that it has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite. I have been advised by friends that it is remarkably efficacious as a cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh." —W. N. Roach, Larimore, North Dakota."

THE SHIPWRECK.

Fifteen Lives Were Lost by the Sinking of the Steamship Scotsman.

Robbers Turned on the Helpless Passengers and With Loaded Guns and Revolvers Compelled Them to Part With the Few Valuables Saved.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—Two hundred and fifty scantly clad, baggage bereft men, women and children were on board of an Inter-Colonial special which steamed into Bonaventure depot Friday night. They comprised the greater number of those who sailed from Liverpool on September 14 on board the steamer Scotsman, bound for Montreal, which was wrecked on the shores of the St. Lawrence River at half-past 2 of the morning of the 31st. It was not only a tale of shipwreck that they had to tell, but one of death, suffering and pillage. For 15 at least of the Scotsman's passengers perished; all suffered cruelly from cold and privation and almost the worst horror of all the men who were supposed to succor and assist those committed to their care in the hour of need, turned on the helpless passengers and with loaded guns and revolvers compelled them to part with the few valuables saved.

Capt. Skrimshire and his officers were exceptions. For the honor of the British merchant marine the crime may not be ascribed to the men engaged in it, but to a gang of wharf rats and hangers-on, picked up on the docks at Liverpool to replace the usual crew of the Scotsman, which joined the seamen's strike on the other side.

All who perished were women. This is accounted for by the fact that they were occupants of the first boat which left the steamer after she struck and which was swamped before it could get clear of the ship.

The Scotsman sailed from Liverpool on September 14. The passage to the Straits of Belle Isle was a fair one, though the green crew in the stoke hole lessened the speed of the ship so that when she reached Belle Isle she was about a day behind her average. Entering the straits of Belle Isle on Thursday night a dense fog blanketed down on the vessel and made navigation a matter of great caution at all times in the straits a precarious undertaking. The speed of the ship was reduced and she felt her way in. At 2 o'clock there was a shock underneath the keel, followed by another and another. The passengers were asleep in their berths and all were awoken by the shocks.

On deck the thick bank of fog shut out the sight of shore. Passengers ran hither and thither, but Capt. Skrimshire and his officials calmed their fears. A superficial examination of the ship told the captain she would be a total wreck and that she must be abandoned.

A port lifeboat was lowered, and in this many of the women and children were placed. Hardly was it clear of the ship when it capsized, throwing its occupants into the water. Those who perished were in this boat. Some were saved, for the ship had listed to port and several women were washed back on to the deck.

One woman clung to a rope for two hours before being rescued. Meanwhile disgraceful scenes were being enacted on board. Hardly had the vessel struck before the men from the stoke hole rushed into the cabins, and slitting open valises and bags with their knives took all the valuables they could lay their hands on. Several of them fired shot guns and tried to force men to leave their cabins. It is said that some of the steerage passengers joined the firemen in looting the baggage of the first-class passengers.

In more than one instance rings were torn from fingers of fainting and dying women.

Adams, Howison and Farquhar Detached. WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Friday's naval orders detach Adm. Howison from command of the South Atlantic station on October 2 and send him home on waiting orders. Adm. Farquhar is detached at once from command of the Norfolk navy yard and Adm. Sampson's detachment from command of the North Atlantic station is postponed from the 13th to 14th of October.

Stay of Execution Granted. SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 30.—Gov. Tanner Friday granted a stay of execution to Michael Emil Röllinger, who was convicted at the July term, 1899, of the Cook county criminal court, of the murder of his wife, Theresa, and sentenced to hang October 13. The stay of execution was granted to November 17, 1899, in order that the case may be taken to the supreme court on a writ of supersedeas.

Transferred to the American Bicycle Co. CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—The bicycle plants of Gormully & Jeffrey and of A. G. Spalding have been transferred to the American Bicycle Co. The former was sold for $100,000 and the latter for $45,000 subject to an incumbrance of $40,000.

SOLDIERS RELEASED.

The Filipinos Deliver Up Fourteen American Prisoners—Five of the Urdaneta Crew Murdered.

MANILA, Oct. 1.—The 14 American prisoners, who have been held by the insurgents, reached Angeles Saturday, Gen. Alejandrino accompanying them. Gen. Otis and Gen. Schwan left for Angeles Saturday morning to receive the prisoners and possibly to confer with Alejandrino and other insurgent leaders.

It is reported from Iloilo that the Tagals have arrested Virayan, a general, charging him with being a traitor. Tribal discord, it is added, is growing. Many of the rebel soldiers have revolted, many European prisoners escaping in the meanwhile.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The war department has received the following:

MANILA, Sept. 30.—Adjutant General, Washington: Communication dated 12th inst., from Gen. Garcia, commanding all insurgent troops in eastern Mindanao, expresses desire to turn country over to United States and surrender insurgent arms.

MANILA, Oct. 1.—An escaped Spanish prisoner, who has entered the American lines, says that Gen. Mascardo, with 800 insurgents, began a retreat out of Porac yesterday as soon as the place was attacked. He moved to Calumpit, a mountain stronghold to the westward where 1,500 other insurgents were massed and where also the rebels have powder works.

Four prisoners from the captured American gunboat Urdaneta were in Porac and were taken to Calumpit by the retreating enemy. The five other men of the crew were killed.

HE DESIRES PEACE.

Message Brought to Gen. Otis from Aguinaldo—Wants to send a Civilian Governmental Commission.

MANILA, Oct. 2.—Aguinaldo's third attempt to shift his difficulties into the field of diplomacy is a repetition of the other one or two with an impossible endeavor to obtain some sort of recognition of his so-called government. The Filipino envoys had an hour's conference with Gen. Otis Sunday morning. They brought from Aguinaldo a message that he desired peace and wished to send a civilian governmental commission to discuss the question. Gen. Otis replied that it was impossible for him to recognize Aguinaldo's government in any way.

They presented a letter from Aguinaldo as "President of the republic," which was largely a repetition of his recent appeals for recognition. Gen. Otis informed them that while he was willing to correspond with Aguinaldo as general of the insurgent forces, he must positively decline to recognize him as president of the civil government.

The Filipinos will remain two or three days. Their movements are quite unrestricted, but they are under the constant chaperonage of Capt. Johnson, of the 16th infantry. Sunday they visited the hospitals and distributed money among the wounded Filipinos after which they made calls and received visitors at their hotel.

One woman clung to a rope for two hours before being rescued. Meanwhile disgraceful scenes were being enacted on board. Hardly had the vessel struck before the men from the stoke hole rushed into the cabins, and slitting open valises and bags with their knives took all the valuables they could lay their hands on. Several of them fired shot guns and tried to force men to leave their cabins. It is said that some of the steerage passengers joined the firemen in looting the baggage of the first-class passengers.

In more than one instance rings were torn from fingers of fainting and dying women.

The Police Interfered. PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—The fight Friday night between Freddy Snyder, of this city, and Teddy McGovern, who recently defeated Pddier Palmer of England, which was scheduled to go six rounds, came to an abrupt end in the second round when the police interfered. Snyder was outclassed and went to the floor twice in the first and six times in the second. He was severely punished, McGovern hitting him at will.

Foul-Smelling Catarrh.

Catarrh is one of the most obstinate diseases, and hence the most difficult to get rid of. There is but one way to cure it. The disease is in the blood, and all the sprays, washes and inhaling mixtures in the world can have no permanent effect whatever upon it. Swift's Specific cures Catarrh permanently, for it is the only remedy which can reach the disease and force it from the blood.

Mr. B. P. McAllister, of Harrodsburg, Ky., had Catarrh for years. He writes: "I could see no improvement whatever, though I was constantly treated with sprays and washes, and different inhaling remedies. In fact, I could feel that each winter I was worse than the year previous.

"Finally, I brought to my notice that Catarrh was a blood disease, and after thinking over the matter, I saw it was unreasonable to expect any improvement by the use of remedies which only reached the surface. I then decided to try S. S. S., and after a few bottles were used I noticed a remarkable improvement. Continuing the remedy, the disease was forced out of my system, and a complete cure was the result. I advise all who have this dreadful disease to abandon their local treatment, which has never done them any good, and take it as a remedy that can reach the disease and cure it even the most aggravated cases.

To continue the wrong treatment for Catarrh is to continue to suffer. Swift's Specific is a real blood remedy, and cures obstinate, deep-seated diseases, which other remedies have no effect whatever upon. It promptly reaches Catarrh, and never fails to cure even the most aggravated cases.

S.S.S. For The Blood
is Purely Vegetable, and is the only blood remedy guaranteed to contain no dangerous minerals.
